Defining Independence

By Mandy Smith, Orientation and Mobility Specialist

There is something about the end of summer that is exciting. School starts and it could be a new beginning for some students or "back to routine" for others. Students have the opportunity for new experiences along with the learning of new lessons. For some, these lessons might be from books. But for most, lessons are learned from their experiences and the people around them.

One lesson a student may learn is his/her definition of independence. If you look up independence in the dictionary you will find "freedom from the control, influence, support, aid, or the like, of others." But let's dive deeper into how this definition is free flowing and not as black and white as one might think.

"Control" is the exercise of restraint or direction. This can be accomplished by making a choice and the person making that choice doesn't have to necessarily be the one that performs that task. I remember years ago I was asked if I was independent. I, of course, answered "YES!" I was asked if I changed my own oil... no. Do I cut my own hair... no. Do I cook every single meal for myself...

no. But I'm still independent right? I started to question myself. It then was explained how I chose who changed my oil. I chose who cut my hair. And I chose where I was going to eat if I didn't cook for myself. Those choices made me able to accomplish tasks how I wanted therefore I was free from the control of someone else making those choices for me. "Influence" can be thought of several ways. One of which is, it is all around; from our friends, family, classmates, and the media. Can we really ever be free from it? Being around people with negative thoughts can also influence others' decision making. However, this is where we go back to control and how the person can control who helps influence his/her choices. "Support and aid" is needed but to what extent is up to that person. Support and aid could be anything from transportation support, accommodations for tests, use of a Smart Phone, and much more. The words support and aid can have negative connotations with them but they shouldn't. No one can get through life without support or aid of someone or something. "Others" can include those mentioned before: friends, family,

KEEP US IN THE LOOP!

In order for RCIL to provide you with the best possible service, it's important that you keep us updated with your status and contact information.

It is your responsibility to notify RCIL if you have a change in address or a new telephone number. Keeping your contact information current with RCIL is extremely important. We make every attempt to keep our FMS consumers informed of up to date information regarding your services and the service provided by your Direct Support Workers. If we have an incorrect address or telephone number it may cause unnecessary delays in contacting you with, or for, information. Such delays may result in an interruption of your services or a delay in your DSW's pay.

It's is also important, and a requirement, that you, or someone on your behalf, notify RCIL when you are out of the home due to a hospitalization, nursing home or rehabilitation facility stay or incarceration (jail). Of course, we do not expect you to delay your treatment because you have to notify RCIL that you are headed to the hospital, but please add RCIL to your list of people to contact when an event happens that requires you to be out of the home and temporarily unable to receive Home and Community Based Services.

REMEMBER – YOUR DSW
CANNOT BE PAID TO PROVIDE SERVICE FOR YOU IF YOU ARE OUT OF THE HOME DUE TO A HOSPITALIZATION, NURSING FACILITY OR REHABILITATION FACILITY
STAY OR IF YOU ARE IN JAIL! THIS IS MEDICAID FRAUD!

Please think of RCIL when you are planning to move, are getting a new telephone number or are out of the home and unable to receive Home and Community Based Services. Keep us in the loop so we can keep you in the loop!

classmates, etc. which I don't think most people want to be free from...

Just like everything else in the world independence looks different on different people. So, as this school year begins and continues, keep in mind all the choices that are being made. Whether you are a student, have a student living at home, or are just a learner of life we can all learn the lesson of finding our own definition of independence.

Kansans with Disabilities Can Work

People with disabilities are more likely to to be in fair or poor health and to experience worse health outcomes than their peers without disabilities. The Kansas Disability and Health Program (DHP) and others like it around the U.S. are working to reduce these disparities because, contrary to public perception, people with disabilities can be healthy.

Likewise, people with disabilities have lower income and higher rates of unemployment than those without disabilities. While many factors affect the employment rate of people with disabilities, one widespread misconception is that people with disabilities are unable to work or do not have the desire to work. Although some individuals with disabilities may experience complications from poor health that limit their ability to work full-time, people with disabilities can work and want to work.

In fact, research conducted in Kansas¹ has shown that people with disabilities who engage in paid employment are actually in better health than their peers. Some may explain this by saying, "They work because they are healthy enough to do so," but the opposite has also been found: People with disabilities who work, even for a few hours weekly, and are not discouraged to do so by their families and health care or service providers, report better health and quality of life.

Without a disability

"We are trying to better our lives. We want to be working members of society and live the American dream."

- A Kansan with mental illness

Though a cause and effect relationship between working and improved health is not conclusive, it is clear that many people with disabilities can work when they have adequate opportunities and supports to do so. The common assumption that people with disabilities cannot work not only limits their income potential and independence – it could also negatively affect their health.

One Kansan's Journey to Health and Self-Sufficiency

When he was 21 years old, Melvin was in a car crash that left him with paraplegia. He had worked for years in construction, but after his injury was not able to return to his construction career. His income dropped significantly, and he decided that college and a new career path were his next steps.

Melvin returned to school and earned a master's degree, but then he was confronted with paying student loans along with his other living expenses. While in college he lived in a studio apartment and got by with services and supports available for people with disabilities.

However, Melvin wanted to achieve financial stability. He knew he needed to put his degree to work and get a job. After convincing his doctors and family that he was able to work and still maintain his health, Melvin found a full-time job – one that paid much more than minimum wage.

While it took him years to recover from his injury and then to obtain his college degree, Melvin is now better off than he was before his injury 30 years ago. He said that working has allowed him to make mortgage payments on a house remodeled to meet his needs, drive his own accessible van and, in his words, "be a productive, healthy citizen."

What is Sepsis?

Sepsis is a complication caused by the body's overwhelming and life-threatening response to infection, which can lead to tissue damage, organ failure, and death.

Sepsis is difficult to diagnose because it happens quickly and can be confused with other conditions.

Sepsis is a medical emergency and is deadly when it is not quickly recognized and treated.

What can you do to prevent sepsis?

1. Get vaccinated against the flu, pneumonia, and any other infections that could lead to sepsis. Talk to your doctor for more information.

- 2. Prevent infections that can lead to sepsis by
 - Cleaning scrapes and wounds
 - Practicing good hygiene such as hand washing
- 3. Know that time matters. If you have a severe infection, look for signs like: shivering, fever, or very cold, extreme pain or discomfort, clammy or sweaty skin, confusion or disorientation, short of breath, rapid breathing, and high heart rate.

What should you do if you think you have sepsis? Seek medical treatment if you have signs of sepsis following an infection.

For more information about sepsis, go to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) at www.cdc.gov/sepsis.

This article is from a fact sheet called, "What is Sepsis?" on the Safe Care Campaign website at http://safecarecampaign.org/sepsis.html.

SPIL Workgroup: Housing

The Statewide Independent Living Council of Kansas (SILCK) is a not-for-profit corporation, governed by a Board of Directors. The Council, in conjunction with the Centers for Independent Living, is responsible for the development of the State Plan for Independent Living. The SILCK is also responsible for monitoring, reviewing and evaluating the implementation of the State Plan.

The state plan has been broken down into four vital workgroups to focus on the most important barriers facing people with disabilities. These groups include: Outreach, Transportation, Employment, and Housing. In this article we would like to share updates about the Housing workgroup. This workgroup has a representative from most of the Centers for Independent Living across Kansas.

The workgroup has two goals they are working on and they are:

Goal 1 - Encourage people with disabilities and CIL staff to participate with local, regional, and state organizations to promote and advocate for affordable, accessible, integrated housing.

Goal 2 - Identify housing information, resources, and training opportunities for workgroup members to share with local advocates.

EQUAL HOUSING

OPPORTUNITY

Since the implementation of this group we have focused greatly on attending meetings with housing stakeholders present for the purpose of providing education as to what people with disabilities need and the barriers we face when trying to find accessible, affordable housing. We also share information regarding rights, reasonable accommodations, and reasonable modifications. We encourage universal design in housing development and offer support to consumers who need to file a housing complaint, seeking education regarding their housing rights, or who would like to learn how to advocate for housing that is truly needed in the community. We also attend housing conferences that have developers, housing management, and property owners in attendance to foster partnership, educate, advocate and provide resource information to as-
